WILD LIFE? THAT IS HOW WE REFER TO THE MAGNIFICENT ANIMALS of our jungles and to the beautiful birds that brighten our lives. I wonder sometimes what these animals and birds think of man and how they would describe him if they had the capacity to do so. I rather doubt if their description would be very complimentary to man. In spite of our culture and civilisation, in many

10 Point 30 Kg.

WAYS MAN CONTINUES TO BE NOT ONLY WILD BUT MORE DANGEROUS THAN any of the so-called wild animals. Nature is said to be red in tooth and claw, and life is precarious in the forest. The strong prey on the weak and the weak develop subterfuges and camouflages to protect themselves. But this eternal way of the forest is due principally to the quest for food. Man does not eat man, but he kills him for other purposes; and even where he does not

8 Point 15 Kg.

KILL THE BODY, HE KILLS THE SPIRIT WE ARE STRANGE MIXTURES OF GOOD AND EVIL, OF civilisation and barbarism, of the divine and the base. We talk in one language and act in another way. We hold aloft noble ideals and shout many slogans, but in our behaviour we belie them. We talk of peace and our manner of doing so is often aggressive and warlike. In India, perhaps even more than in other countries, there is this difference between precept and practice. In no country is life valued in theory so much as in India, and many people would even hesitate to destroy the meanest or the most harmful of animals. —Pandit Nehru

The heart of the devotee is like the dry match; and the slightest mention of the name of the Deity kindles the fire of love in his heart. But the mind of the worldly soaked in lust and greed, is like the moist match and can never be heated to enthusiasm 12345678

The moth once seeing the light never returns to darkness; the ant dies in the sugar-heap, but never retreats therefrom. Similarly, a good devotee gladly sacrifices his life for his God by renunciation. She who has a king for her lover accept the homage of a street beggar. So the soul that has 456789

WILD LIFE? THAT IS HOW WE refer to the magnificent animals of our jungles and to the beautiful birds that brighten our lives. I wonder sometimes what these animals and birds think of man and how they would describe him if they had the capacity to do so. I rather doubt if their description would be very complimentary to man. In spite of our culture and civilisation, in many ways man continues to be not

THE INDIAN LION IS ONE OF THE rarest and most important of the wild animals of India, and yet it is one of the least known. It used to range over most of North India except in the easternmost parts, and as for South of the Narbada river 1234567890

10 Point 30 Kg.

IT ALSO USED TO BE VERY COMMON in India, for roundabout the middle of the last century a certain "sportsman" shot over 300 of them, fifty of which were in the neighbourhood of Delhi. No fewer than eighty lions were killed within three years by another "sportsman", a cavalry officer, who chased them on horse-back

8 Point 15 Kg.

BY 1880 OR 1884 THERE WERE NO LIONS LEFT IN India, except in the Gir Forest of the old princely state of Junagadh. Lacking the cunning of the tiger and its preference for thick habitat, the lion fell an easy victim to sportsmen, especially when the latter became equipped with improved fire arms. The lion is also partly diurnal in habit, while the tiger is almost entirely nocturnal. There has been a lot of discussion about which of the two animals, the lion or the tiger

6 Point 8 Kg.

IS THE OLDER INHABITANT OF INDIA. AS SAID BEFORE, the tiger is believed to have entered India from the North-east after the last ice age. Most naturalists now seem to believe that the lion is the older inhabitant. Some people believe that the tiger was responsible, in some ways at least, for the "retreat" of the lion to its last stronghold in the Gir Forest. But this is not so. For the lion has disappeared from many parts of Asia where there were no tigers in existence. Moreover in those areas where both the lion and tiger formerly existed together, they would probably not come into contact with each other 123456

APART FROM THE CORBETT NATional park in Uttar Pradesh, Kanha must be one of the best places in India seeing tigers. The tiger is believed to have entered India from Northern Asia after the last ice age. It must have come through China, past the eastern end of the Himalayan range and into north-east India. It could not reach Ceylon, which was seperated by sea. It has been recorded in all

PARTS OF INDIA EXCEPT THE DESERT regions of the north-west and the higher Himalayas. The present-day Manchurian or Ussuri tiger is a larger beast with a longer coat. It is to be presumed that the slightly smaller and thinner coated tiger of India is a modification evolved over the years due to the greater heat and moisture of its new habitat and possibly due to the fact that smaller prey has to be killed in India than in the pre-history days of northern Asia. The term "Royal Bengal" which is some

8 Point 15 Kg.

TIMES ADDED TO THE TIGER IS FANCIFUL and not recognised by zoologists. There is only one sub-species in India, and the tigers found in Bengal are not necessarily larger or more handsome than those in Assam, Bihar or other parts of India. I don't know how the word "Royal" originated, unless it was from a tiger shot by the Duke of Windsor when he was Prince of Wales; but the word "Bengal" could have been rightly applied, as the type specimen, from which Linnæus gave the name 'Felis tigris' in 1758, came from Bengal. The tiger has since
